OFFICE OF THE MILITARY SECRETARY TO THE VICEROY.

Tour of His Excellency the Viceroy.

General Instructions and Standing Orders.

II.

The following rules will be observed by the Military authorities at all stations visited by the Viceroy and Governor-General during His Excellency's tour :-

Salutes. - Viceral salutes of 31 guns will be fired at all -- stations where there is a battery or fort from which salutes are - fired on His Excellency's arrival and departure, and on other -- ceremonial occasions when called for. When the Viceroy's arrival or departure takes place after sunset, or on a Sunday, the salute will be fired the following morning.

The battery firing the salute must be placed at some distance from the road along which His Excellency the Viceroy is to pass.

Escorts. - His Excellency the Viceroy's escort consists of -

1. On occasions of high State ceremonial -

One Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.
One Regiment of British Cavalry.
Cavalry, Auxiliary Force, India, if present.
His Excellency the Viceroy's Body Guard, when present.
One Regiment of Indian Cavalry.

The Viceroy's Body Guard will, on all occasions when present have the post of honour immediately preceding and following His -- Excellency the Viceroy's carriage; the Officer Commanding the Body Guard riding on the right of the carriage.

This escort will only be furnished when specially asked for by the Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

2. On all ordinary State occasions, that is for public arrivals or departures, when His Excellency the Viceroy attends any public ceremony, or visits Indian Chiefs in British territory :-

Guards of Honour. - On His Excellency the Viceroy's arrival at, or departure from, a station, unless the arrival or departure is notified as "private," Guards of Honour of British and Indian troops, of 100 rank and file with band and colours, will be drawn up in Review order at the Viceroy's residence and Railway station respectively. Should the Viceroy be travelling by road a Guard of Honour of British Infantry, if available, if not, of Indian Infantry, will parade at the Viceregal residence.

Whenever Indian Auxiliary Force troops are present in sufficient numbers they will be detailed for duty at the station and at the Viceroy's residence in addition to the Guards of Honor of British and Indian troops.

Guards.- An officer's Guard of British Troops if available, if not, of Indian Troops, will be mounted on the house or camp occupied by the Viceroy.

This guard will, in all cases, except at Dehra Dun where the Gurkha Guard will be commanded by an Indian Officer and in Indian States where no troops of the Indian Army are present, be under the command of a British Officer, who will report himself to the Military Secretary to the Viceroy for orders. This guard will turn out for no one except His Excellency the Viceroy: - sentries will present arms to His Excellency and salute other officers in uniform.

The strength of the guard will depend upon the number of sentries required for the Inner Cordon (see "Rules" below) and other posts such as Front Porch, Main Entrance Gate, sentry over guard, etc., and these can only be determined in consultation with the local Police authorities.

In addition to the above, a guard of Indian Infantry will be furnished of sufficient strength to find a single sentry for the Military Secretary's Office Treasury, as well as sentries for -- gates, Outer Cordon and other posts which, in consultation with th the Police, it may be found necessary to provide.

Orderlies. - Four Indian Cavalry orderlies and six Indian Infantry orderlies should be furnished. They will report them-
